Our Spay Packages

*WHAT IS A GASTROPEXY AND DOES MY DOG NEED ONE?

This is a preventative procedure, which involves surgically attaching the stomach to the inside of the abdomen. This is done to prevent rotation of the stomach or gastric-dilatation and volvulus (GDV).

GDV (also referred to as “bloat” or “gastric torsion”) is a condition where the stomach dramatically distends with gas and then twists on itself. This cuts off the blood supply to the stomach as well as impairs blood flow returning to the heart. It can lead to necrosis (tissue death) of the stomach, splenic torsion, congestion and impairment of the abdominal organs, cardiac arrhythmias, shock, and death.

This most commonly occurs in:

- Large and giant breed dogs, especially purebred breeds.
- Deep chested breeds.

- Most commonly affected breeds: Great Dane, St Bernard, Weimeraner, German Shepherd, Doberman Pinscher, Rottweiler, Standard Poodle, and Mastiff.

If you have one of these breeds or another large breed dog, please ask for more information on this potentially life saving preventative procedure.

**WHAT IS A DECLAWING?

Declawing the front feet is an irreversible surgical procedure that is performed under general anesthesia. Hospitalization for one to two days may be required. If you choose to declaw your feline it is best to have this procedure done at a young age as they tend to recover more quickly. Our feline declaws are performed with a surgical laser. As it cuts, the laser automatically seals small blood vessels and nerve endings around the cut, so there is less bleeding and pain. As a consequence, cats recover faster from laser declawing.

WHEN CAN I SPAY MY PET?

Your pet can be spayed as early as 12 weeks old as long as she weighs at least two pounds.

Of course this varies by breed. It is best to spay your pet before they reach sexual maturity. We also encourage spaying early as they recover faster than adults and it reduces the risk of disease later.

WHY SHOULD I SPAY MY PET?

Spaying your pet will significantly reduce the risk of developing mammary cancer and completely eliminate the chance of a pyometra (an infection in the uterus). Having your pet spayed will not affect her friendliness, playfulness or personality.
